

Why study Philosophy and Ethics?

We are, of course, biased but there really are so many reasons to study Philosophy and Ethics. First and foremost it is a fascinating and interesting subject but also you can learn so many skills that will be essential for a range of disciplines at degree level and indeed in the workplace.

Students of AS and A2 level Philosophy and Ethics develop key skills such as the ability to construct and forward an argument as well and the ability to analyse and evaluate arguments. These skills will be very useful, if not essential, for many career paths.

Many professions, including law, medicine and accountancy, now require engagement with and consideration of ethical issues something students of Philosophy and Ethics will be very familiar with.